Editorial: The Greensboro Record

Not only has Greensboro and the State, but the Nation as well, sustained a severe loss in the death of Dr. Charles Duncan McIver, president of the State Normal and Industrial College (on September 17). . . .

Men—great men—die every day, but their places are soon filled and they are almost forgotten, but it is no exaggeration to say that to fill his place as president of this institution will be a task of difficult proportions. Men to operate and successfully conduct the college will be found, but to measure up with the late president is another matter. His life was consecrated to the work; he it was who first agitated the establishment of the school—a school to enable woman to become independent. He was its first and only president. The writer knows that the most flattering offers were made him to connect himself with other institutions, the first being the presidency of the University at Chapel Hill, but he put them all behind him.

His forte was not only managing the school, but in keeping it always at the forefront; in building it up and enlarging it. He was an aggressive man, yet did he have an enemy? Never! Critics there were plenty, but so open and above board were his methods that even these could but admire him. He used no halfway measure; what was worth doing was with him worth doing with all his might. Politicians sought his overthrow, but he gave them no heed; his sole aim was the welfare of his beloved institution. How well he succeeded need not be told; it is a lasting monument to his memory.

He was a lovable man, a man of originality; his methods were decidedly original, and equipped with the strong arm of justice, he swept all opposition before him whenever and wherever the college was concerned. Everyone of the thousands of young women who attended the Normal loved him; he made their lives pleasant; his great aim was to make the poorest girl, the friendless girl, feel that she was at home; that poverty was an honor if honorably worn.

But Dr. McIver's work was not by any means confined to the institution over which he presided so ably; he was prominently identified with educational work throughout the country, having for many years been an hon-

FOUNDER'S DAY . . 1956

DR. W. W. PIERSON
Acting Chancellor
Woman's College, UNC

*Delivered at the Founders Day Convocation
October 5, 1956*

Mrs. Preyer, Alumnae and Guests of the College, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I am for this occasion a substitute speaker, or what in baseball language may be called a "pinch hitter". I have heard a pinch hitter defined as a person who is inserted in the lineup in a special circumstance and who might be expected in that circumstance to do better than the regular player, but who is not in all round play good enough to make the regular team. Although I cannot under those specifications qualify in either capacity, I am appreciative of the thought of the committee in asking me.

You may be interested in knowing that we had invited Mrs. John Dickinson, who was formerly Miss Lula Martin McIver, to speak tonight, but an accident which she experienced prevented her participation in this program. We shall miss her eloquent voice. Our sincere wish is that she may have a speedy and a complete recovery.

I accepted this invitation because during the four months I have been Acting Chancellor my knowledge of the work of Dr. McIver, and that of his associates and successors, has increased, and my consciousness of its character and significance have likewise grown so that it is my pleasant privilege to pay tribute tonight to the man who, more than any other, led the movement for the establishment, participated in the construction, laid the foundations of the traditions, set the compass of the early goals, and administered this institution during the fourteen years of his presidency.

At any and every Founder's Day celebration we should, I think, find it fitting to give attention to origins and to make acknowledgments of indebtedness for the work of those who in the beginning labored with their minds, hearts, and hands that something we regard today as great should have its being and should prosper over the years.

This year and this day have the special significance that they occur almost exactly fifty years after the untimely and sudden death of Dr. McIver. You will recall that it was on September 17, 1906, while aboard a train which was bearing his friend, William Jennings Bryan, and a considerable group of admirers through this State and to Greensboro, that he was stricken. Mr. Bryan, who had come to make a political speech, instead delivered a funeral oration.

Today, a half century later and with that time perspective, those of us who never knew Dr. McIver in person might, as I have, form their impressions from what they have read and heard of him. My own impressions, aside from what I have read, have been mainly derived from my conversations with my friends Dr. Roulhac Hamilton, R. D. W. Connor and Edgar W. Knight. I think of Dr. McIver as a man, large and robust in body, endowed with a voice strong in volume and heartiness, and possessed of a rich sense of humor, which had its source in the land and people of his native State. His speech was often ornamented by the use of imagery and sometimes, as we are told, made interesting by his exercise of a gift for mimicry. It has been said and written that he had so much of weight to say that he did not have time to give care to the form and manner of saying it. His friend, J. Y. Joyner wrote that he was an "irresistible" speaker. It would seem that his eloquence flowed from a deep well of earnestness, from a steady regard for and a thorough knowledge of the practical, from a will to convert the spoken word into action, and a will to persevere in spite of discouragement and temporary defeats. Above all he had the will to persevere despite partial successes. It has been said that he spoke as if wielding a sledge hammer. Yet any one who might read about him and about the great effort made by him and others at rebuilding the ancient commonwealth of North Carolina through education, industry, agriculture and better government, which took place in this State during the reforming years from 1887 to 1906, will find McIver quoted with uncommon frequency, so that such a reader could scarcely fail to get the idea that his sayings and aphorisms were widely popularized. It is perhaps not too much to claim that the day was to come when his sayings became a part of the common consciousness of North Carolinians. These sayings are still quoted as representing the best thought of that period of reform and regeneration.

McIver was a man of principle, to which he adhered as from conviction. To some this attitude and conduct might seem to have approached the austere, but there is the evidence, equally convincing, of humor and of human sympathy. He had, I believe, a genuine love of his people, and he had the gift, not always possessed by men of action and distinction, of communicating the fact of that love to the people. He found his abiding, personal

THE COVER . . .

On Founder's Day at 10:00 in the morning students and members of the faculty and administrative staff gathered at the statue of Dr. Charles Duncan McIver on front campus for a commemorative service. Acting-Chancellor W. W. Pierson presided at the service.

As a symbol of respect and gratitude for Dr. McIver and the men and women who worked with him, representatives of the staff and student body placed flowers at the base of the statue. Percy Donnell, the employee of longest service, represented the College; and student representatives were Ann Crawford, president of the Senior Class; Sandy Walker, president of the Junior Class; Terry Garrison, president of the Sophomore Class; Judy Penn, representative of the Freshman Class; and Beth Paul, representative of the Commercial Class. Emily (Harris) Preyer, president of the Alumnae Association, represented the Alumnae; and Sadye Dunn, president of Student Government, represented the students.

interest and mission in education; he was himself a classroom teacher with, as the saying goes, the "chalk on his hands and under his fingernails".

The story of the broadening of interest of this classroom teacher and school administrator, so that he became an educational statesman with a State-wide and South-wide mission, is well known as a part of the history of North Carolina. This story has such phases as: the conducting of county institutes for the improvement of teachers; the organization and conducting of educational conferences in the State and region; the campaign for universal education under public support as a public trust in benefit of youth and the State; the campaign for the education of women as a paramount but hitherto neglected duty, in order that they might be better prepared as homemakers, as teachers, and as industrial workers in suitable trades; participation and official service in the Southern Education Board; and the campaign for the establishment and later the administration of a publicly chartered college for the education of women.

Many of these phases developed concurrently. All of them point to a movement for a public school system that would educate all the people. As is well known, this movement was initiated by the selection of McIver and Edwin A. Alderman to conduct county institutes for teachers. These institutes were designed not only for the improvement of teachers, but as a means of carrying the cause of universal education to the people. As recorded in the very delightful book of Mrs. Frances Gibson Satterfield, Dr. Alderman tells of the beginning of this unique campaign:

"We were to start out in a few days on a new and untried experiment in North Carolina or the South, a deliberate effort by unique campaign methods to create and mould public opinion on the question of popular education, involving taxation for the benefit of others. Men like Wiley and Murphy and Caldwell and Scarborough had fought this fight, but not just in this way There was no precedent for what we were trying to do, except Horace Mann, and he seemed so far off and so great that each one of us would have laughed at the other for mentioning the comparison. I remember that we talked about our plans and purposes and difficulties until the cocks began to crow. I told him to let me say one more word and then let us both go to sleep. He replied in his hearty, wholesome way that he did not propose to be put to sleep and let me have the last word at the same time. We then decided to make a night of it, and talked on until the sun arose. I am inclined to think it about the best night I have ever spent, for an intelligent and unselfish idea held our youth under its spell, and bound us for life to a service which was not the service of self."

Many others were to join in this campaign in one or another of the forms it took, such as: Major S. M. Finger, J. Y. Joyner, Edward P. Moses, M. C. S. Noble, P. P. Claxton, and as its political voice, Charles B. Aycock. And there were outsiders who participated, such as: J. L. M. Curry and Nicholas Murray Butler. My good friend, the late Dr. Connor, often told me that this campaign reached every corner and county of the State, or as the saying goes, "reached from Manteo to Murphy". A campaign, designed and intended to be a cause and to have an effect, achieved the great end of bringing about a change in the thought of most North Carolinians. Dr. Joyner called it a revolution in the thinking of people—which is perhaps the best sort of revolution that can occur. Others have called it a renaissance in North Carolina education. I do not know that any apportionment of credit is here required, but I believe any list of those primarily responsible for the success of the campaign would include the names of Aycock, McIver, and Alderman. It was of McIver that Governor Robert B. Glenn, in a proclamation to the people of North Carolina, said: "No one has rendered the State a greater service".

This movement led to the formulation of many statements of principle. Perhaps the central and basic idea was that which was for many years proclaimed by this College when it was declared that it "stands for a public school system that will educate all the people", indicating thereby that the college for women was a part of that system. Associated with this declaration is the corollary written by McIver that "a state is great and powerful in proportion as its people are educated".

Such principles made today seem like truisms that are so far axiomatic as to need no justifying argument in order to be accepted. McIver's career was a proof, however, that they had to be fought for not only in the beginning, but over and over again. He was doubtless aware that the problems of education multiply and recur with the passage of time and the very advancement of civilization. Of education, as of history and politics, it can be said that "it has no concluding chapter". Nonetheless, in respect of the circumstances with which he coped, and the problems which he set up as a manageable area for discussion and solution, his was a campaign courageously waged and was in his life time and in the generation that followed, magnificently successful and constructively fruitful for the State of North Carolina.

The history of the College and the part of McIver in its foundation, and the roles of Alderman, Joyner, Claxton and Holmes — all persons of later prominence and distinction here and elsewhere and all members of the first faculty—in the development of the institution, are not needful to tell at this time. I cannot refrain from making a few comments. McIver, I believe, thought of the College as a part—a functioning and to him a necessary part—of the system of public education of North Carolina. Secondly, he devoted himself as President to the selection of an able faculty and an effective and humane administrative staff. The names of Miss Kirkland and Mr. Forney as staff members, of Miss Boddie and Miss Mendenhall as teachers, will long live in the memory and affection of alumnae. A faculty and a staff who believed in the ideal of excellence as a working principle, seem to me basically sound as prerequisites for the building of a worthy institution.

In his work with the College, as some at Chapel Hill said and as many thought, McIver became the State's foremost educator in the field of public higher education. He certainly be-

IN RALEIGH . . .

At the same time on Founder's Day that the members of the College Community placed flowers at the base of Dr. McIver's statue on the campus, alumnae representatives paid tribute to the founder of the College by placing a floral wreath at the McIver statue on Capitol Square. The members of the Wake County Chapter who participated in the service were Cora (Stegall) Rice '45 (president of the Chapter), Penelope (Davis) Plummer '99, Martha (Blakeney) Hodges '18, Libby (Bass) Beard '47, Annie (Kizer) Bost '03, and Daisy Waitt '99.

UP and DOWN College Avenue

Registration

The College has tallied its largest first semester enrollment since 1952. According to Dr. Rollin E. Godfrey, registrar, 2,504 students of all classifications are registered.

There are 2,064 undergraduates in the courses leading to bachelor of arts and bachelor of science degrees: freshmen, 700; sophomores, 580; juniors, 377; and seniors, 407.

There are 216 students in the one-year Commercial Class. Graduate students number 55, with 151 additional students enrolled for graduate work in the Saturday classes. There are 38 special students.

For the first time in the State, elementary school music classes are being taught by television. The pupils are in Bessemer School (Greensboro) which does not have a music teacher; the teacher, Miss Birdie Holloway of the College music faculty, conducts the classes from the WUNC-TV studio on campus. Each Tuesday afternoon (1:30-2:00), ninety children at the school, viewing Miss Holloway's instruction over two 24-inch TV receivers, are instructed, following a course of study directed toward developing their singing and rhythm abilities, and toward creative growth and knowledge of music. The year's program is expected to help answer the question as to how well television instruction can take the place of instruction in the classroom.

Four panelists led the two-day (October 11-12) discussions of the Inter-Faith Forum: Dr. Roland M. Frye from Emory University, Dr. Malcolm McAfee from Davidson College, Dr. Claiborne Jones from North Carolina, and Dr. Edwin A. Penick, Jr. from Randolph-Macon College. A special speaker for the Forum, the topic of which was "The Impact of Religion on Fields of Knowledge", was Dr. Frank Lau-back, author, evangelist, and language expert who is credited with leading a world-wide anti-illiteracy campaign.

Dr. Lyda Gordon Shivers, head of the Department of Sociology, is currently teaching a graduate credit course in educational sociology over WUNC-TV (8:00 on Tuesday and Thursday evenings). The curriculum title of the course is "The Integration of Education with the Life and Institutions of the Community." The course is intended to bring into focus the changing social situation imposed on schools and the reasons that the schools have to change to meet them.

Another graduate credit course will be taught over WUNC-TV second semester. More detailed announcements will be made later during the present semester.

"Inside S.G.A." was the topic of the 1956 Pre-School Conference, which was led by Sadye Dunn of Bladenboro, president of Student Government. The purposes of the pre-school conferees were (1) to realize that they are "Inside S.G.A.", (2) to see the possibilities of service in their various capacities, and (3) by sharing a common understanding of their purposes and goals, to become a united group — students, faculty, and administration — in their philosophy of living at the Woman's College.

A full course in Russian history is being offered this session for the first time. Mr. Jordan E. Kurland, who holds a certificate from the Russian Institute of Columbia University, where he is a doctoral candidate, is teaching the course.

"The Redcoats are coming" to Woman's College again! More than 88 per cent of the Class of '59 have ordered red class jackets, and if deliveries come through as promised, the "first wearing" will be on October 30, no matter what the weather.

The 1956 presidential election was taken apart and diagnosed at the tenth annual Harriet Elliott Social Science Forum. Party spokesmen for the Democratic and Republican parties, with two commentators, discussed the theme "The Election: Issues and Prospects", during the two-day session (October 25-26).

Senator Sam J. Ervin, Jr., Democrat, from Morganton, North Carolina, presented the issues for the Democratic Party; and Mrs. Robert W. Leeds, trademark specialist, attorney, and author who made U. S. Patent Office history in 1953 by becoming the first woman to take the post of Assistant Commissioner of Patents, was the spokesman for the Republican Party.

The forum commentators were Dr. Ruth Silva, associate professor of political science at Pennsylvania State University and an expert on the question of changing the method of electing the President, and Mr. George V. Denny, Jr., founder of America's Town Hall of the Air.

James D. Wordsworth, Jr., of Raleigh, has been appointed personnel and purchasing officer at Woman's College, to be concerned with matters of non-academic personnel and purchasing. Prior to his appointment, he was employed by the State Personnel Department.

Don't throw your ALUMNAE NEWS away! Put it in your town or school library, your husband's office, your doctor's or dentist's office . . . anywhere, but somewhere that others may see it and learn of Woman's College.

Status: McIver Building

Except for a few faculty offices, McIver Building is not being used this session. The structure has been closed because of its unsafe condition.

A request of $1,300,000 for the construction of a new classroom building to replace McIver (to be built on its present site and named the same) was submitted to the State Board of Higher Education. (All requests for permanent improvements, repairs, and betterments are made by the state institutions of higher education to this Board.)

The Board, after studying all the requests submitted to it, classified them into seven categories, according to the natures of the requests: Category 1 was set-up for utilities; Category 2, for cafeterias, and so forth. Category 4 was set-up for buildings, and the request for the replacement of McIver Building was so classified. Within Category 4, a new McIver Building and the replacement of the Pharmacy Building at the University in Chapel Hill were considered by the Board to be most urgently needed among all the requests presented. Such was their report and recommendation to the State Advisory Budget Commission, to whom the Board, in turn, reports.

The request is now under consideration by the Budget Commission.

BLIND STUDENTS

VELMA

by Martha Jester '58

"No, we don't know where it is, but we'll find it," frankly stated with a cheerful grin, is a response typical of Woman's College freshmen.

In three cases this fall, however, it is an answer quite amazing to veteran class-finders at the college. The three freshmen, sponsored by the State Commission for the Blind and the North Carolina Department of Rehabilitation, are Velma Joy Keller of Lenoir, Betty Jean Whitley of Waxhaw and Shirley Dean Tester of Haw River. Velma and Betty see dimly, but Shirley is totally blind. All maneuver without the aid of canes.

Although they have been in Greensboro only two weeks, the three roommates have learned the location of most of the buildings on the campus,

From Cone Hospital $100,000 For a Nursing School

(Reprinted from the Greensboro Daily News)

The Cone Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees announced on September 22 that it has appropriated $100,000 to the University of North Carolina for the establishment of an experimental nursing school at Woman's College.

The announcement was made by Benjamin Cone, president of the hospital board.

The appropriation is in the form of a grant, Cone explained, which would provide a two-year collegiate course in nursing education at Woman's College followed by one year of internship in Cone Memorial Hospital.

Cone pointed out that the type of school "would meet the needs of young women in the Piedmont. It would provide them with a background of collegiate training and the advantage of learning through practical experience in our modern and fully-equipped hospital."

The nursing education plan proposed here is contrasted with the four-year programs now in effect at Duke, Carolina, A & T and Winston-Salem Teachers College. It differs also from the three-year "diploma schools" which are operated exclusively within a hospital.

Another type of nursing education is available in the state: a three-year diploma holder may take two additional years' work to obtain a bachelor of science degree in nursing.

Cone said the basic idea behind the three-year plan was that nursing education is the responsibility of educational institutions rather than hospitals.

"We are underwriting this Woman's College program with the prospect of starting in September, 1957. We arrived at the plan through a committee of the board composed of Roger McDuffie, Miss Mereb Mossman, Mrs. Julius Cone and Dr. M. D. Bonner in conferences with Dr. W. W. Piercion, acting chancellor of Woman's College."

The trustees' proposal is subject to approval by the University of North Carolina trustees, the State Board of Higher Education and the curriculum is subject to approval by the State Board of Nurses Examiners.

Facilities of Cone Hospital will, according to the plan, become available

That Great CU Day . . .

Some 700 Woman's College students boarded 19 buses at noon one Saturday in late September to journey to Chapel Hill to join their "brothers" from N. C. State and Carolina for the annual Consolidated University Day activities. This was the first of three CU Days to be held this year: one is held on each campus annually.

Highlights of the activities included the Carolina-State football game, a reception at Graham Memorial after the game, and a dance in the evening, which included the crowning of the CU Day queen, Ann Fitzhugh, a Woman's College senior. Ann was selected from among eight girls representing the three colleges. (Note: On October 10, Ann was elected Woman's College Beauty Queen, and she will preside over the annual Junior-Senior dance.)

More about Piney Lake . . .

By GWEN HARRINGTON '57

. . . from The Carolinian (October 1, 1956)

Tired of studying? Tired of going to classes, of going to the dining hall, of going to Aycock? Tired of your roommate? Your counselor? Yourself?

Well, IF, after only three weeks of school, you ARE weary of life at Woman's College (perish the thought!), pack up a pair of blue jeans and an old shirt, throw in a beat-up pair of sneakers, and take off to the Country Club of W. C. (with apologies to Miss Grogan and Weil Hall), Piney Lake.

You don't have to pay the expensive fees of resorts, and it isn't necessary to dress for dinner. In other words, to quote the familiar song, at Piney Lake the "livin' is easy!"

To the students who were not fortunate enough to attend Pre-School Conference and who have not yet made an excursion to this fabulous place, let us give you some idea of what Piney Lake is. If we sound "gung-ho", pardon us. But after you read this—after your first trip out there—well, chances are you will be just as enthusiastic.

Piney Lake was purchased during the summer from A. Blumenthal, a Greensboro business man who had developed it for some years as a country estate, for approximately $65,000. Situated near the Liberty Road six miles south of Greensboro it includes over forty acres of fenced-in, landscaped grounds, asphalt drives and parking area and wooded tracts.

One of the features which will appeal most to Woman's College students is a four-acre lake with a second two-acre settling lake. The lake front has a concrete pier, aluminum boats, and a concrete float with regulation fixtures. So, whether you swim or prefer to stay on top of the water, the facilities are there.

Also on the grounds are a large residence, a caretaker's home, a barn, garage, recreation pavilion, tennis courts, and dressing rooms. In the main house is a feature which will appeal to tired music majors who desire to take a busman's holiday—a baby grand piano. Staying in the house, even overnight, will make you feel as if you were the guest at the nicest resort hotel.

Currently residing in the caretaker's house are one of the Physical Education professors, Miss Marjorie Leonard, her cocker spaniel, and watchdog, Liz.

Piney Lake's facilities will permit Woman's College to extend the camp leadership training program that for some years has been carried on at its small recreation camp at Guilford Lake by the Physical Education Department.

All Woman's College students and faculty members, however, will have use of Piney Lake. It may also be used for large outdoor conferences and smaller indoor meetings, where quiet and seclusion are important.

Woman's College botanists and biologists may be expected to use Piney Lake as a favorite area for field trips and the gathering of specimens of vegetation and marine life.

And of course, Piney Lake will be favorite spot for dorm picnics. Gray Dorm was to have had one last week, and according to Dean Katherine Taylor, who is one of Piney Lake's most enthusiastic supporters, would have set a record by being the first dorm ever to participate 100% in such an event. Everybody went! It may not be long before most of the other dorms will be trying to tie that record.

Miss Ethel Martus, Head of the Physical Education Department, has been the sparkplug behind the purchase of Piney Lake, and is one to whom much of the credit for such an outstanding addition to Woman's College facilities is due.

Soon after the property purchase, Acting Chancellor W. W. Pierson declared that "It is not just a luxurious retreat, though the landscaping, buildings, equipment, and expensively constructed lake suggest just that."

"Its real purpose is to provide an ample place in acreage and facilities for the diversified sports, recreation, and the outdoor activities that the college promotes. Emphasis will be on the professional training program of outdoor education and recreation, the teaching of crafts, and water sports and safety."

"Since Woman's College trains scores of recreation directors and camp counselors," continued Dr. Pierson, "Piney Lake will be an ideal place for the more effective training of girls entering these fields of work. It is a lovely place that should afford much enjoyment and benefit for the whole student body and be available to all our organizations and departments."

Dr. Pierson also said that it is one facet of Woman's College life with which every student should become acquainted. If you ever have a chance to take a trip to this "Country Club," don't pass it up. Go, girls!

Dear Alumnae

A committee of fifteen has been appointed to make nominations for the position of Chancellor of the Woman's College. Of the fifteen, five are from the Board of Trustees, five from the Faculty, and five from the Alumnae. The names and addresses of the Alumnae representatives are listed below for your convenience in replying to any one of us.

The committee as a whole has met and elected Mr. Reid A. Maynard of Burlington, Chairman. Each of the three sub-committees organized and accepted certain assignments. Our responsibility is to gather pertinent information from the Alumnae. We will value your opinions, suggestions, or any names which you would like to offer for the office with information.

Attached are certain suggestions which you may use in making reply, but please don't feel limited by them. We shall appreciate your giving thoughtful and prompt attention to our assignment.

Members of the Alumnae sub-committee on nominations for chancellor at the Woman's College:

Mrs. W. L. Lambert (Julia Ross)
430 Sunset Avenue
Asheboro, N. C.

Miss Annie Lee Singletary
A-10-66 Twin Castles Apts.
Winston-Salem, N. C.

Mrs. Hall Swain (Virginia Sloan)
2268 Circle Drive
Raleigh, N. C.

Judge Susie Sharp
Reidsville, N. C.

Miss Gertrude Weil
200 West Chestnut Street
Goldsboro, N. C.

Sincerely,

JULIA ROSS LAMBERT

THE CHANCELLORSHIP
THE WOMAN'S COLLEGE
OF THE
UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA
GREENSBORO, NORTH CAROLINA

1. The Chancellor has many and varied duties. Some are more important than others. Some may be delegated. What do you consider the Chancellor's more important functions?
2. What qualities should be found in a person who is offered the Chancellorship?
3. Please give the name or names of any candidates you wish to suggest, with addresses and specific information that will help the committee.

Detach along this line.

*... about the Chancellorship
of the Woman's College*

Fifty years ago in 1906:

"The opening exercises of the State Normal and Industrial College were peculiarly impressive, appropriate, and eloquently shadowed with saddened dignity. Instead of the usual bright, happy, smiling faces of the enthusiastic students upon a return for another year's work, there was the impress of sorrow stamped upon each face on account of the deplorable loss of Dr. McIver, the creator of the institution, its founder, its only president and truly faithful friend since it was organized less than fifteen years ago: for while the whole State will miss him, none will miss or grieve over his loss as will his students, who more than any one else could, can realize fully what his death means to them, to the College, to the cause of woman's educational right, as a duty from the State."

Catawba County News (October 9): "Some friends of the College feel anxious about this great institution since its Great Leader is gone. It is a fact that the great personal influence and the almost super human effort of Dr. McIver was put to the test every two years in order that the appropriations from time to time should be what was necessary to carry forward the great work of the Institution, and now that the Great Man is gone, it is well for us to know what men who ask for votes to go to the Legislature will do about this. . . . The time was in North Carolina when efforts were made to cut down the appropriations of this Institution as well as other State Education Institutions. . . . Let our candidates for the Legislature speak out in no uncertain sound."

The Board of Trustees placed Professor J. I. Foust, Dean of the Faculty, in charge of the affairs of the College until a selection of Dr. McIver's successor was made.

Twenty-five years ago in 1931:

Governor O. Max Gardner said in the Founder's Day address: "If you will let me, for the moment, play the teacher and give you advice, I would urge you to think on these things: do your job, do the job today that is expected of you today, know or try to know what is going on, play on the team, meet the requirements of discipline, of obedience, of self-sacrifice that you know is your proper duty, don't cut corners, feel that you yourself are playing at least a small part in the drama of struggle that we call civilization, be loyal to your best impulses, and be of good cheer. There may be some reason, at least some excuse, for those of us who are old or middle-aged to feel anxiety and at times to be depressed. But not for you."

Ten years ago in 1946:

Dr. Benjamin R. Lacy, Jr., president of Union Theological Seminary, paid high tribute to Dr. J. I. Foust (who had died on February 15, 1946) in his Founder's Day address: "While these spacious grounds and imposing buildings are the result of his foresight, the major work of Dr. Foust was brought into the life stream of North Carolina through her daughters and their sons. . . . Dr. Foust helped to bring into reality the magnificent dreams of Governor Charles B. Aycock, the educator."

And Mrs. Peter F. Lynch (Class of 1913), who spoke for the Alumnae, said: "He (Dr. Foust) lit ten thousand candles in North Carolina, and today their gleam illuminates the eager faces of children in schoolhouses in every corner of the State."

We note with pride that . . .

Annie (Spainhour) Walker '16, who has gained a reputation in her community for "getting things done" in civic and religious affairs, has been selected as Morganton's Woman of the Year. Her selection was based on the "lifetime of service in religious, civic, and social activities" which she has led in her native community. She was for ten years a member of the city school board and is a former president of the Woman's Club. Currently she is a member of Morganton's Planning and Zoning Commission, the Board of the Morganton-Burke Public Library, the Board of Governors of the Community House, and a trustee of Grace Hospital which she is also serving as secretary of the Board and chairman of its committee on nursing and nursing education.

Lelah Nell Masters '38, editor of Cone Mills' publication The Textorian, has spearheaded the first series of "Industry-Journalism Days", a project of the Committee on Education of the American Association of Industrial Editors. "Designed to give future industrial editors in college and university journalism classes an idea of the situations they will encounter when they go to work," a series of conducted plant tours has been arranged, in cooperation with some twelve companies, by this committee of which Lelah Nell is national chairman.

Mary Collins Powell '24 has been appointed Dean of Students at Wheelock College in Boston, Massachusetts. She was formerly administrative assistant in the teacher education department, Child Education Foundation, New York City.

Edna (Bigham) Ross '25 has been appointed Acting Director of Guidance in the State Department of Public Instruction. She was formerly Director of Guidance at the Senior High School in High Point. Of Edna's appointment, Superintendent of Public Instruction Carroll said: "The State is fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. Ross during the coming year. She is a superior guidance worker, and those who come in contact with her will readily recognize her strength in this area."

Marita (Frye) Carrithers '24, after reading in THE ALUMNAE NEWS, of the possibilities of teaching in overseas Army schools, began investigating her chances of securing such a position, and, consequently, was selected to join the faculty of the American Dependents School in Okinawa for the 1956-57 term. There are ninety-six teachers in this school, which serves the children of thousands of GI's on the island.

Mary (Eppes) Turner '42 addressed the two-day Pre-School Conference at the College. As a past president of the Student Government Association, she discussed "S.G.A. as Viewed by a Past 'Insider'."

Elizabeth (Burroughs) Scott '42 is an English professor at the American University of Beirut (Lebanon). She, her husband, and their two children are in Norfolk on a six months' sabbatical leave, while Mr. Scott prepares for a doctorate in philosophy from Harvard.

She Keeps Convention Wives Busy

. . . from The Washington Post and Times Herald

by MILLCENT BENNER

More and more, conventions are becoming a family affair and pert Polly Pierson, '47, is one miss who has set herself up in business to see they stay that way.

"Wives won't come to conventions with their husbands unless they know beforehand their stay will be well planned," explains Miss Pierson, promptly getting to the point. "They don't like to be at loose ends."

Which is where Polly enters the picture. In April she singlehandedly set up "Your Hospitality Desk," designed to dispense with the dilemmas of delegates in a strange city, and straightway went about courting likely convention clients.

Her first taker was the National Tank and Truck Carriers, Inc. When Polly broached their boss with the idea of installing her Hospitality Desk at the organization's national convention, she presented him a page outlining a list of proposed services.

When dealing with men, Polly says she's learned not to take up their time with talk. "He read the first paragraph and hired me," she says.

Polly scored an immediate success. On the first day, she planned a breakfast and fashion show at the Shoreham for the wives and followed up that afternoon with a trip to Laurel Race Track where one race was run in their honor. The next day she arranged a tea and tour at the Korean Embassy.

Next, came the American Academy of General Practitioners, 3,500 strong with wives and children in tow raising the total to more than 7,000. "I felt swamped!" she remembers.

During the 6-day conclave, Polly says she acted as a "glorified" information service. For two days she stationed herself behind a desk at the Statler Hotel and for four in mammoth National Guard Armory, scene of the actual convention.

"People wanted to know where to eat and what to see. One mother," says Polly, "inquired whether 'Damn Yankees' (then playing at the National Theater) was suitable for her young daughter to see."

By the time the smoke cleared from that convention, Polly decided she could use a helpmate and shortly added attractive Mrs. Compton Jones to the staff.

Together they mapped out the extracurricular activities of the United Automobile Workers. "They were a most appreciative lot," laughs Polly.

"It's possible to see Washington for only 35 cents," says Polly. "A tour of the Capitol (which is always her first recommendation) is 25 cents and one dime takes you to the top of the Monument.

When the American Society of Appraisers arrived for their convention, Polly planned a lavish breakfast-fashion show for the fairer half. But breakfast was late being served so Polly stepped on stage and told jokes to the early risers until the ham and eggs were on the tables.

Auction Gives Lively Boost to Scholarship Fund

GUILFORD COUNTY ALUMNAE CHAPTER

"Those white elephants taking up room on the closet shelf (you'll soon be needing that space for Santa Claus lay-aways) may be just the thing to make life complete for the girl who sat next to you in chapel when you were a Woman's College student.

"That's what the White Elephant Auction Committee said to the Guilford County alumnae (in preparation for the Auction Sale held in Elliott Hall Ballroom on October 25 for the benefit of the Chapter Scholarship Fund)."

On the night of the sale Hurricane Flossie "flipped discouragement toward the Guilford County alumnae, but about 100 patrons, including a few husbands, braved the elements to bid on white elephants to the tune of $448.40. And donations from alumnae who preferred home fires to Elliott Hall brought the fund to about $500. . . .

"I don't know much about white elephant sales, but I have brought along a white elephant," began auctioneer Charles W. Phillips, Director of College Public Relations and husband of Lela (Wade) Phillips '20. And he held up a little elephant made of white china. It brought between $2 and $3, too.

"All the wares were disposed of except the 'slightly used husband' who wore a disguising paper bag over his face. There were no bidders.

"The coupon calling for a pastel to be painted by Betty Carroll (Wimbish) Warner '51 was knocked down to Mary Ruth (Hall) Lloyd

'51 for $22. Those who know the Warner work say it was a magnificent bargain.

"A few customers fussed about goods they had bought being damaged. The items went back to the block — and brought just as much on the rebid.

"Hottest bidding hovered about some pottery pieces, old glass and antique silver, some walnut picture frames and a new orlon sweater with a Paris label. Alumnae-baked cakes brought on an average of $3.

"Charles M. Adams, College librarian, had the heavy job of cashier

Adelaide (Fortune) Holderness '34 was chairman of the Auction Committee, and Jane (Wharton) Sockwell '31 and Louise (Dannenbaum) Falk '29 were "first assistants". Betty (Trimble) Kent '39 assisted the auctioneer. "All say, however, that the auction wouldn't have gotten off the ground without the stalwart efforts of the 53 members of the telephone brigade." Associational Business

DECEMBER 1st IS THE DATE . . .

December first is the date set for our Association's Mid-Winter Luncheon. President and Mrs. William Friday will be guests of the Alumnae, and President Friday will speak at the Luncheon Meeting.

Please remember to circle that date on your calendar and write in for a reservation now. I certainly hope we shall have a BIG crowd; and as Andy Griffith would say, "Y'all come"!

Cordially,

Emily Harris Preyer

Secretaries . . . NOTICE

Expert secretaries in North and South Carolina and Virginia who would like to take the 1957 Certified Professional Secretaries Examination should submit their applications by December 15. The regional examination will be held at the Woman's College on May 3-4, 1957.

Entry blanks for the twelve-hour examination, which is open to qualified men and women over 25 years of age, are being issued by the Qualifications Committee, the National Secretaries Association, 222 West 11th Street, Kansas City 5, Missouri. Those who pass the examination receive the CPS rating and certificate.

for the Mid-Winter Meeting of the Alumnae Association, according to President Emily (Harris) Preyer. The meeting, which will be a luncheon, will begin at 12:30 in Elliott Hall. Mr. William Friday, acting president of the University of North Carolina, will be the after-luncheon speaker. A report from the Nominating Committee will be made, and additional nominations may be made from the floor.

You will receive a notice about this meeting and a reservation blank for the luncheon, as specified in Article IX of the By-Laws of the Alumnae Association: "... the president shall call a special business meeting of the Association between October first and March first of each year, by written notice sent through the Alumnae Office to the last known place of address of each active member at least two weeks before such meeting . . ."

The football season will be nearly over, and the Christmas-rush season will scarcely have begun . . . begin planning NOW to come to the College on Saturday, December 1.

NOMINATING COMMITTEE

The Nominating Committee has begun work on the slate of officers to be presented at the Mid-Winter Meeting. The offices for which nominations are to be made are those of president, second vice-president, recording secretary, and four positions on the Alumnae Board of Trustees.

Any alumna may make suggestions for these positions by contacting the chairman of the committee, Annie Lee (Stafford) Greenfield '19, Kernersville, North Carolina, or any of the following alumnae who have been asked to serve as members of the Nominating Committee:

An Open Letter

Dear Members of the Alumnae Association,

As I begin packing and making plans to return to school, my mind turns back to the memories and experiences of my freshman year—a year which was made available through the generosity of the Alumnae Association.

I would like to thank each member sincerely and to express a desire that I shall be worthy of the confidence and trust that you placed in me. I hope that I shall be a credit to the Alumnae Association during my remaining three years at Woman's College and afterwards when I join the ranks of other alumnae.

Again I would like to say thank you for the wonderful opportunity which you made available to me.

Sincerely,
MARGARET HELMIS

and follow their freshman schedule unescorted. "The first place we located was the dining hall, and number two was the post office," Betty volunteered.

Velma related that "one day we got awful brave and went down to the corner (campus term for the shopping center at Tate Street and Walker Avenue). We can see well enough to make out the names of the places, and we were all hungry. The first thing we bought was an order of French fries."

The girls take notes in class using a Braille slate which fits over a sheet of paper, and make the symbols with a stylus. "We use thinner paper here than we're used to, but it doesn't make as much noise in class, and it is faster too," they say.

For studying outside of class several "readers" have been employed and again the girls take notes from which they later study. Marilyn Shugar of Raleigh, a sophomore, has volunteered to take charge of the history and health lessons. Adelaide Benninga of Asheville, freshman, helps them with French; Grace Whitehurst of Beaufort, a junior English major, is giving the English readings; and Millie Pitts of Newton, sophomore, will aid with math assignments.

Patricia Hammond, a senior from Charlotte, is the reader for Velma, a music education major, and aids in all her studies except English. Betty plans to take an AB degree in elementary education and Shirley is majoring in social studies with a view toward "some form of social work later." She is planning additional study at U.N.C. and Velma wants to get a master's degree in music.

As a music major, much of Velma's time is spent practicing. Her main problem now is that in the college band, where she plays trombone, "we use all sheet music and I have to memorize every number before I can play correctly."

She has taken piano lessons since the second grade, loves to play, and hopes someday to be an instrumental and piano teacher. She also plays the clarinet and flute.

The three students graduated last year from the State School for the Blind in Raleigh.

came a leading spokesman in the South and an active spokesman in the country for the education of women. He is, as I said, still quoted, still praised, and to some extent, still followed. The College, under any of its successive designations — The Normal and Industrial College, The North Carolina College for Women, and The Woman's College of the University of North Carolina—is his most enduring monument.

I should like to say a word about the differing types of monuments which have been erected in commemoration of his life and achievements. First, as all of you know, Governor Robert B. Glenn called upon the people of North Carolina to erect a heroic statue in memory of its citizen whom he called the man of unsurpassed service to the State. And the people of North Carolina promptly responded — men, women and school children. Their gifts, whether pennies or dollars, were sufficient in amount to defray the cost of such a statue. You will remember that a discussion arose as to where this statue should be placed. Some wished it to be located on the Capitol grounds at Raleigh. Others thought that it should be on the campus of the college he founded. You know that the result was that the original work of the sculptor was placed in Raleigh and a replica was placed on the campus. Thus it was that McIver, who belonged to both the State and to the College, had statues in both Raleigh and Greensboro.

I should now like to draw your attention to a monument of a still different type. The meeting of the General Assembly, following the death of McIver, occurred in 1907. To it Governor Glenn sent his message in which the following unusual and interesting reference was made to the College:

"Carefully read the report of the Acting President, and then have him and the Superintendent of Public Instruction to come before your committee and go over with them, what they request, and then vote this College what you deem necessary for the proper equipment and maintenance of an Institution whose value cannot be estimated in dollars and cents."

The Acting President, Dr. Foust, among other requests, had asked for funds with which to complete the construction of certain dormitories and for the erection of a building in which instruction should be given in the sciences. The Legislature of 1907, responding to these recommendations, appropriated the sum of $50,000 for the completion of the dormitories and for the construction of a "McIver Memorial Building".

If I may digress for a moment, let me say that I was interested in reading several portions of the Appropriations Act of 1907. Among the items on which my attention fell were the appropriations for support and maintenance. I asked several of my friends if they knew how much the State then appropriated for the support and maintenance of the University of North Carolina and how much was appropriated for the same purpose at State College and at the Woman's College. None of them knew the several amounts. When I asked them to guess what the amounts were, the estimates ranged as between that appropriated for the Woman's College and that appropriated for the University from four to ten times as much for the University as for the Woman's College. I believe that everyone of them was astonished when I told them that the sums for support and maintenance for each of these two institutions, the Woman's College at Greensboro and the University at Chapel Hill, were the same, namely $70,000 per annum for each. I might add parenthetically, lest you are troubled by speculation overnight, that the appropriation for support and maintenance to the North Carolina College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts at Raleigh was the sum of $32,000 per annum.

To return to our theme, the point I am trying to make is that by legislative mandate the McIver Memorial Building was provided for by law. You may be interested to know that the College spent $31,000 of the fifty appropriated to complete the dormitories. Unable to construct a memorial building with the remainder, a little over $18,000, the College borrowed enough to construct the first unit, which was completed in 1908, costing $54,000. Subsequently, as you know, two wings were added to the original unit and the structure became popularly, but mistakenly, known as the McIver Building.

This building, as completed, became the location of the heaviest student traffic of any on the campus and thus the center of instruction in the arts and sciences. The great majority of students enrolled in the College since 1908 had classroom experience in this building. As of last year, eleven of the academic departments were housed in it. It is reported that the registrations for classes held there in the fall semester of last year were in excess of 5,600 and that the maximum concentration of students at any one hour was in excess of 1600. This was a building constructed of stone, brick and wood, without steel reinforcement, there being, I am told, but one steel beam in the entire building. It was not fireproof.

Over the years this structure was worn with much using. Experts reported that moisture and internal vibration had caused structural deterioration. Fire and insurance experts had condemned it as a fire hazard. These several considerations were the bases for a dramatic and eloquent plea of Dr. Jackson some sixteen years ago, when he requested appropriations which would make possible repairs so that the building would be structurally sound and provide for changes and protective measures so that the building would be fireproof and safe. As Mr. Claude Teague, former Business Manager at the College, has told me, it was then that the budget authorities of the State informed Dr. Jackson that it would be unwise to undertake the reconstruction and repair of the building, since it would be more expensive to the State to do so than it would be to replace the building. This represents the alternative involved in the position of the College ever since, namely that the building should either be structurally repaired and made fireproof, or it should be replaced as an instructional resource imperatively needed.

Additional years have passed and the structure has at once experienced greater usage and undergone further deterioration. About a year ago a heavy block of plastering fell, fortunately without injury to any person, but it gave all seriously to think of the risks being incurred. The upper floor of the building was forthwith closed to further use of any kind. Since then the plastering has been removed from the ceilings of nearly all classrooms on the first and second floors. This operation, exposing fundamental wood structure, removed a further fire barrier and increased the fire hazard. At the same time this removal made the transmission of noise easier and impaired the use of the building for purposes of instruction.

This summer the question before those responsible for both student safety and for the proper conduct of instruction was whether or not the building should be used for further classroom purposes. As a newcomer to this campus, I felt keenly the weight of responsibility of taking a part in reaching a decision in the matter. In the end mine was the responsibility for making the recommendation to the University as to what should be done. I did not feel, after visiting the building and hearing experts express their opinions, that it would be safe for students to be concentrated there in such numbers; so it was recommended that the building be closed to further instructional use until made safe or replaced. Such a decision meant that classrooms for these eleven departments had to be found elsewhere; it meant dispersion of departments, the use of space intended and designed for other purposes, the use of space such as the basement of this auditorium, not designed for instructional purposes; it meant that the Sciences and Home Economics, receiving transferred classes, might have to suspend plans for expansion in programs and student services in order to accommodate these displaced classes; it meant great inconveniences for students and faculty.

At the risk of being thought of as having an emotional and sentimental experience, I will tell you that one evening, on standing outside the McIver Memorial Building and seeing it deserted and without light, I made a pledge that I would join others — the alumnae, faculty, the University Administration, students and friends of the College — in an effort to bring about the replacement of the old McIver Building with a new memorial building in which again would be heard the voices of youth and of instructors — a new memorial building erected on the same foundations and under the same name. In such an effort we might invoke the spirit and will of the founder and convert the spoken word into action. We might resolve, as he did, to persevere in spite of any temporary discouragement.

I shall now close these remarks, not only with reference to the last matter mentioned, but with reference to this Founder's Day by quoting the beautiful statement made by Dr. Julius I. Foust, expressed in 1907, when he said: "The spirit of the founder still lives to bless the College and the State".

All photographs of campus activities were taken by Mr. A. A. Wilkinson, Director of the College News Bureau.

From Cone Hospital $100,000 for Nursing School to the student nurses from Woman's College in 1959. Prior to that time, however, there may be student visits under college supervision.

"If the program is a success," Cone said, "it will be the greatest development in nursing which has occurred in nursing education in this part of the country."

"I have every reason to believe it will be successful. And you will recall that the charter of this hospital provides for the training of nurses. This is the method we feel will be most effective in accomplishing this object," Cone said.

The hospital gift would provide $20,000 for 1957-58 and $40,000 each for the next two years. It will provide funds for the salaries of a director of the Woman's College School of Nursing, instructors in professional courses in nursing, a clerical secretary and the cost of transporting students to and from the hospital.

It is expected, according to plans worked out with Chancellor Pierson, that the director will be named next spring, so she might aid in selecting instructors and set up the organization.

Woman's College would administer the program, select the staff and provide facilities for the students in residence. Students during their third year would not reside on the college campus and would be only under the guidance and regulations of the hospital, which would compensate them.

This school year, according to the agreement, the college will appoint a faculty committee, to act with hospital representatives, to plan the curriculum.

It was also agreed that the first class admitted next fall would be about 25 and that the next year's class might be larger.

In a letter to the hospital board, Dr. Pierson said he looked on the experiment with enthusiasm.

"If agreements are reached and ratified by the university, I feel that it can go without further evidence that the college would embark upon it with enthusiasm and faith. The great respect in which the hospital is regarded is an assurance that the terms of the agreement will be observed," he said.

Don't throw your ALUMNAE NEWS away! Put it in your town or school library, your husband's office, your doctor's or dentist's office . . . anywhere, but somewhere that others may see it and learn of Woman's College.

She Keeps Convention Wives Busy . . .

Polly also remembers the time a convention-eering father had forgotten his 2-year-old daughter's birthday.

Polly remedied the catastrophe with a call to a local department store where she ordered a pretty nightgown to be sent to the little girl special delivery. Polly charged it to her own account.

Polly is still eating candy left behind by the National Candy Wholesalers Association and shudders on the spot to recall the day she organized a sightseeing trip for two bus loads of boys and girls, aged 5 to 19.

"We went to see the FBI and Smithsonian," she says. "I was counting heads every two minutes. When it was all over I came home and just died."

Polly is presently preparing for the forthcoming convention of National Licensed Beverage Association. Already she has made arrangements for a style show to be sponsored by Coca-Cola.

Born in Florida, Polly now has her home in Maryland and office in Arlington, Va. A former physical education instructor, she somehow manages to teach ballet and tap to 40 youngsters in Vienna, Va., as well as creative dance, drama, art and music to 3, 4 and 5 year-olds.

Thinking over her past few months of hospitality success, Polly says that wives of visiting delegates usually fall into two categories: Those who want to sleep and breakfast in bed, and those who are anxious to see the city.

"I'm ready to be of service to those who are ready for action, and urge the other half to get out of bed."

NEWS NOTES . . .

Rachel (Brown) Clarke's new address is 1629 Columbia Road, N.W., Apt. 827, Washington 9, D. C.

1910

Lena (Green) Armstrong lives in Glenallen, Va.

1911

Catherine (Jones) Pierce, retiring head of the reference department of the general library of Duke University, was honored at a dinner on the Duke Campus by the staff association of the library.

1913

Sallie Sumner '13, who has retired as Executive Director of the Young Women's Christian Association of Charlotte, was the subject of a "salute" by the Charlotte News. During her 32 years of service to the YWCA in Charlotte and four other cities, Sallie "has done everything from advising her residence girls on love problems to shooting away pigeons that nest in the attic." Her years in Charlotte were very successful ones: the Central YWCA was completely renovated, a branch "Y" was built, a successful centennial drive for money was conducted, and more classes were added to the "Y" program.

A story on Gladys (Avery) Tillett was third in a series of Charlotte's busy grandmothers written by Barbara Brawley for the Charlotte Observer.

Mayor M. L. Lupton proclaimed Thursday, July 19, 1956, as "Gertrude Carraway Day" for the City of New Bern. The Mayor said the day was so named "so that citizens may pay special tribute to Miss Carraway for her outstanding achievements and her fine service to her community and nation, especially while serving during the past three years as president general of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution." A special program was held at the City Hall, an official flag of the city was given to Miss Carraway, and an inscribed gold key to the city was also presented to her.

Annie (Beam) Funderburk spent the summer of '55 in France in study and travel. She took time to attend the Baptist World Alliance in London in July 1955.

Tempe (Boddie) Barringer of Sanford had the misfortune of being in an automobile accident and was unable to attend the class reunion. "For several years I have been a business woman, working in my husband's office. I like it very much and wish that I had taken it up as soon as my boys finished school, altho' I am not quite as free as I was before."

Janette (Cox) St. Amand sent a letter, excerpts from which I quote:

"I can't begin to tell you how much I regret that I cannot attend the 40th class reunion the 1st and 2nd of June. Forty years is a long time and yet the years have sped so swiftly that one scarcely realizes the number of them.

Here is my trouble. I am North Carolina's President of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, as you see by this letterhead.

This is the second year of my term as U. D. C. President, an office which takes a great deal of time certain seasons of the year. This is it. It took me over three weeks to visit the 12 districts in North Carolina, I have been to Biloxi, Mississippi for a week, and have visited eight chapters in the state, all of this since Easter. A trip home for a quick change of clothes and to pay outstanding bills, and I was on the road again.

My office has given me a rich experience in which I have been able to make many valued friends in other states. Last November I attended the General Convention, UDC, in Texas the very week it snowed there. This coming November I travel to Los Angeles. Let's hope the usual does not happen there—an earthquake. A little snow reminds me of home but I have no yen for an earthquake.

My love to all of you."

Sara G. Dining is teaching mathematics in Leaksville High School.

Anna (Doggett) Doggett's son Wesley lives in Greensboro. When her husband retires shortly, they plan to locate in Greensboro. She issues a tentative invitation to '16'ers for the 50th reunion.

Mary I. (Dority) Stimson who lives near Morganton and who specializes in raising violets from which she and Annie S. Walker had a design, made, "Class of 1916" for Louise's funeral. This was greatly appreciated.

May Louise (Fallon) Boyce had just returned from a Bankers' cruise to Nassau and Havana and was unable to come to the reunion.

Lizzie (Fuller) Pickett writes from Lake Summit Drive, Route 1, Box 327 A, Winter Haven, Fla.: "My husband retired in 1954 and we sold our home in Bethesda, Md. and moved here. We live about one-half mile from the famous Cypress Gardens. I hope if any of you ever visit the Gardens you will stop to see us. My mother lived with us for a number of years. Her health has been very bad for about a year. She fell on August 9 and broke her hip. The shock and operation which followed were too much for her poor heart. She died on August 12. We took her to Raleigh, N. C. for burial on August 14."

Jessie (Ganey) McNeill says she lives in the pine woods near Hope Mills, and loves it. She had pictures of her two charming grandchildren; a boy and a girl who live in Charleston, S. C.

Mary Gwynn sent a wire—"Love and best wishes to everyone. Wish I could be with you,"—of greeting which arrived too late for the luncheon. Sara told us about Mary's Cove Camp, designed for mountain children and of her two weeks Nature Institute.

Lucy (Hatch) Brooks' daughter, Margaret, lives in Evanston, Ill. Her doctor son Ralph is doing his internship in Camden, N. J. Lucy and her husband attended the World Council of Churches.

Claire (Henley) Atkisson is the author of a recent manual on piano instruction for children. She was invited to be a member of a panel at a music clinic in Chapel Hill this summer. In late July Claire underwent a major operation from which she is now recovering.

Elizabeth (Horton) Thompson lives in Austin, Texas. She lost one son in the war; her other son is a physician.

From Janie Ipock: "I am very sorry but the above date conflicts with our commencement. I surely would like to meet with the other '16'ers. Remember me to each of them."

It was reported that both Addie (Kluttz) Statts and her husband teach.

Edwina (Lovelace) Wells has been the principal of an elementary school in Wilson, N. C. but is now retired.

Eva (Lucas) Young is Deputy Clerk in The Wilson Division of the U. S. District Court. The class members regretted so much to learn that Ruth Tate Anderson finds it unwise to be in a crowd on account of a slight difficulty in her speech.

Mattie McArthur, now retired, lives in Fayetteville.

Sadie (McBraver) McCain's youngest child, Jane Todd, is married to a Presbyterian minister John Reagan. They spent two years at the University of Edinburgh where Sadie visited them, and are now with their young daughters in Language School at Montreat and plan to leave within the year as missionaries to Japan.

Jay (McIver) Hester recalled in her graphic way many incidents which she related for our pleasure.

Alberta Monroe, West End, N. C., is now retired: we extend our sympathy to her in the recent death of her father.

Genevieve P. Moore teaches in Aberdeen: she is as vivacious as in the years of our youth. During the summer, she attended the Virginia Highlands Festival, where she took a course in "teaching art."

Naomi (Pool) Lyday's son is a doctor in the U. S. Army.

Mary B. (Powell) Brantley is retired from her Raleigh school work as Dean of Girls. She lives in Elon College and assists as vice president in an administrative capacity in a chemical firm, operated by her father.

Caroline (Robinson) Dellinger sent snapshots both of herself and of her daughter. Her mother, past 90, is living with Caroline and is still vigorous.

Flossie (Stout) Shaw lives in High Point and has one daughter who is married. Her daughter has a lovely voice.

Carrie (Stout) Watlington is in State Hospital at Morganton. Annie Walker goes to see her. She has two lovely daughters, both of whom are married.

Frances (Summerell) Stickney is back from foreign parts and is teaching English in a N. Y. suburban school. She spent ten days in Greensboro this summer. After we had luncheon together, I suggested that she send a message to the class: Her address and message follow:

Mrs. W. H. Stickney

(Frances Summerell)

1839 Atlantic Avenue

Bellmore, L. I., New York

"Not glad to have returned from Brazil but oh so thankful for the brightest star in my American firmament—in fact a double star—to be that I am still counted among my class members and am a Southerner—even tho' I must live in the North. My husband's working with stock brokers makes that a must. Otherwise I'd adore coming to live in the Southland. Am I proud of that distinction! Let them call you a rebel, be proud that you have that distinction.

"Much love to all my classmates. I wanted so much to be at our 40th Reunion but I labor in a 'Blackboard Jungle' Schoolroom and I was forced 'to be about my business' at that time."

Marguerite (Wiley) Bilbro teaches 1st grade in Asheville.

Pauline (Williams) Koonce attended Coronation of Queen Elizabeth. Her son Calvin had three years in the Navy: he is in the Warehouse and Distributing Business: her son Marvin is currently president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce in Raleigh, has travelled extensively. Both boys are very much interested in civic life.

1918

Martha (Blakeney) Hodges, wife of North Carolina's Governor, celebrated her birthday on September 12, aboard a North Carolina Air National Guard plane, en route to Raleigh from the Southern Governors Conference at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Members of the official state delegations surprised Mrs. Hodges with a birthday party, cake included.

Sarah (Canady) Pearson lives at 200 East Church Street, Frederick, Md.

Anne (Reynolds) Clifford's address is 12511 Perthshire, Houston, Texas.

Ruth McLean, 174 Darrington Street, S.W., Washington 24, D. C., wrote the following letter at Commencement to the president of the Class of 1926. "The letter of yours was received and appreciated. It came at a time when it seemed that I couldn't possibly spare the time to reply. I would have loved attending the 50th reunion, although I have no grandchildren or even children to brag about. Last year I finally finished up work for my doctorate in medical bacteriology at the School of Medicine, University of Pennsylvania. I spent two years, 1950-1952, on leave from my job in the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Research Center, Beltsville, Md., but still had research to finish during week-ends on returning to my job. It was a big undertaking which interfered seriously with the pursuit of a normal life. I still have a tremendous back log of work at the laboratory and at home. However, I enjoyed it and even at 50 expect to make it 'pay off'. Competition for the better jobs is keen but that adds to the pleasure when you don't get too serious about it.

This was all by way of explaining why I couldn't get to the reunion. I was sent this year by the Department of Agriculture to the annual meeting of the Society of American Bacteriologists meeting in Houston, Texas, the last week in April and still had to finish, en route, a paper I read there. I was scheduled to serve a two week's active duty military training period the first two weeks in June. As a reservist in the Air Force, I spend two weeks a year on active duty at the 1100th U. S. Air Force Hospital at Headquarters Command in Washington, D. C.

My sister, Cora, who also works in a Government laboratory in Washington, and I, share one-half of a duplex house and raise flowers and vegetables in our small yard for fun. This summer we are joining our sister, Jean, of Chapel Hill, for a trip to the West Coast.

Please remember me to any members of the Class of '26 you see."

Mildred Louise Kiser to Clyde Wallace Miller, Jr., June 23, 1956, First Baptist Church, States-

"The worth of a strong college to a student is not, as some suppose, the mere fact that it gives the opportunity to a student to perform systematic literary tasks assigned by teachers, or that it gives opportunity to work in laboratories and libraries. These are necessary and important, but the students' great advantage at college is the spiritual and mental atmosphere of the place. It is intangible, but you can feel it. It cannot be measured, but its effect is everywhere manifest.

"The love of truth for truth's sake; the belief in equality before the law; the belief in fair play and the willingness to applaud an honest victor in every contest—whether on the athletic field, or in the class room, or in social life; the feeling of common responsibility; the habit of tolerance towards those with whom one does not entirely agree; the giving up of small rights for the sake of greater rights that are essential; the recognition of authority and the dignified, voluntary submission to it even when the reason for the policy adopted by the authority is not apparent; the spirit of overlooking the blunders of others and of helping those who are weak; the contempt for idlers and shirkers; the love of one's fellow workers even though they be one's rivals; patience in toil; self-reliance; faith in human progress; confidence in right; and belief in God—these are the characteristics of the atmosphere of a great and useful college. The young man or young woman who by association with faculty and fellow students becomes imbued with these principles gains what never can be secured in the same degree in the best homes or small schools or anywhere else except in college."
